

T³: Today's Teaching Tip

Facilitating classroom discussions

Thirty years of research in the scholarship of teaching and learning in higher education have demonstrated that, when students are engaged in the classroom, they learn more.

The think-pair-share is a useful classroom assessment technique. It works by asking students to:

- Take one minute to write in response to a question, then
- share their thoughts with a classmate, and finally,
- have pairs of students share with the whole class.

To learn more, visit the link: Class Discussions